"There is no foundation whatever for this statement. The Creeks who are dissatisfied with the prospective allotments of their lands in severalty, under the pending treaty, are so few in numbers that any course they may take is unimportant, so far as the Creek Nation is concerned. During last winter a delegation of full-blood Indians came to Washington to protest against any legislation in regard to Creek lands, and especially against their allotment in severalty. No attention was paid to them by Congress or by the departments, and the interested parties who induced them to come here were obliged to take them back at their own expense. There always have by Congress or by the departments, and the interested parties who induced them to come here were obliged to take them back at their own expense. There always have been meddlesome individuals at work in the Indian Territory, trying to induce dissatisfied members of the tribe to emigrate to Mexico, where attractions are held out to them of unfimited hunting grounds and freedom from white man's interference for an indefinite period of time. Nothing will come of it. The great body of the Creek Indians and the Indians of the other five tribes have accepted the situation in good faith, and are anxiously awaiting the legislation of Congress which shail complete the allotment of their lands in severalty, giving each Indian his share of the common estate. I am certain there is no foundation whatever for the statement in regard to the Seminoles. They are a well-disposed, peaceful and intelligent people and are living happily and contentedly in their reservation."

Judge Springer added that, in his opinion, Congress early in its next session will ratify the pending Creek and Cherokee agreements without important modification.

"I wish you to say, also," said Judge Springer, "that the article in a St. Louis paper, stating that I am disqualified from acting as attorney for the Creek and Cherokee nations, is absurd and silly upon its face. PREACHER BUILDS AN ARK. Warns His People to Guard Against the Big Flood.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL Houston, Tex., Aug. 14 -F. K. Smith, a negro preacher, known here as "Elijah the Prophet," has been for several months pre-Prophet," has been for several months pre-dicting a lons season of rain. The preacher and his flock now point to the fact that rain has fallen in Houston every day for forty-four days, and claim that this is a fulfillment of their leader's prophecy. Smith is prophesying still more rain. He said this afternoon that what has fallen is only a beginning. He is pleading with his people to build covered boats, which he says they will need to save them from that flood which is coming. He is also showing faith in his prophecy by his works, having built an ark and placed it in his church.

DISCIPLINING THE CADETS.

Severe Punishment Meted Out at

New York, Aug. 14.-Forty cadets at the West Point Military Academy have been sentenced to the most severe punishment ever inflicted in the course of discipline at the institution. The punishments were inflicted because guilty ones had greeted Tactical Officer Lindsay with "silence" when he entered the
